Women in Christian Media Founder & President Suellen Roberts anticipates the event will connect and refresh women in Christian communications. It was just 9 years ago when Roberts began to test the waters for an industry group geared toward women. The idea sparked immediate enthusiasm. Within two months, Roberts secured a leadership team and unveiled WCM in 2001. We are celebrating significant growth in its first 9 years. The schedule of events throughout the country will stick closely to WCM's mission to encourage, connect and mobilize women working in all forms of Christian media ministry.

WCM was birthed out of Roberts' desire to connect women in purpose and vision. She believes that providing a platform for women in Christian media will yield powerful results. "Mobilizing women in Christian media is essential to advancing the gospel in these times," said Roberts.

Roberts is encouraged by the groups' rapid progress. "I have organized many women's groups over the years, but this one is different," said Roberts. "There is an enthusiasm among these women like I've never seen. That is why we've come so far, so fast," she added. Those serving on the leadership team played a vital role in making it happen. The leadership team consists of seven women serving on the Executive Committee and a base of 14 on the board. WCM has Regional Connections the Southwest/Dallas, Southeast/Nashville, Midwest/Chicago, West Coast/Costa Mesa, soon to open in the Northeast/New York. In addition international groups are already being established.

At the heart of WCM's mission is to be a source of encouragement that facilitates lasting friendships and continual growth. "WCM provides a common ground for media professionals creating a synergy to explore new horizons," said Karol Ladd, renowned author and media personality Ladd also commented on the invaluable connections she has already made through WCM. "My involvement with WCM has been the starting point of invaluable relationships. The events provide opportunity to exchange ideas and keep a pulse on the various programming available for women," she said.

Based on response from those who have attended past WCM events, the group is making an important impact through enriching the lives of those involved personally and professionally. When asked about the future of WCM, Roberts anticipates a remarkable outcome. "I expect that great inspiration and productivity will come out of all this, for women in the industry and for female media consumers," said Roberts.

More information about WCM can be found at www.womeninchristianmedia.org.
